MANCHESTER MAN SENTENCED FOR RE-ENTERING THE UNITED STATES AFTER BEING DEPORTED

CONCORD, NEW HAMPSHIRE – United States Attorney Tom Colantuono reports that 38-year-old Radhame Troncoso was sentenced to 41 months imprisonment after pleading guilty to the crime of re-entering the United States after being deported. Troncoso is a citizen of the Dominican Republic. Troncoso was also sentenced to serve 3 years of supervised release after he is released from prison. However, it is likely that the Department of Homeland Security will initiate proceedings to deport Troncoso to his home country of the Dominican Republic.

Troncoso, who is also known as Radhame Froncoso, Rafael Polanco, Lorenzo Onedito, and Daniel Cruz, formerly lived on Massabesic Street in Manchester. He was deported from the United States to the Dominican Republic on October 26, 1988, and October 8, 1997. He was found in Manchester on December 30, 2003, by an Immigration and Customs Enforcement Special Agent. Troncoso was indicted by a federal grand jury on January 22, 2004, for illegally reentering the United States after being deported.

In commenting on these cases, United States Attorney Tom Colantuono said, "Effective enforcement of the nation's criminal immigration laws is central to the missions of the Department of Homeland Security and the United States Attorney's Office. These cases and many others like them reflect our commitment to the vigilant enforcement of those laws."

These cases were investigated by the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement of the Department of Homeland Security, and are being prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney Mark S. Zuckerman.
